Building Teams in a Primary Care Network

How will teams be built?

Through the Health Connect Registry, we are building primary care teams to meet the needs of patients in the community. This means we will be building teams that are made up of different types of health professionals, including family physicians, nurse practitioners, and other health professionals.

Primary care networks (PCNs) will bring together health professionals from a community, and working together to provide care to patients. This means we will be building teams that are made up of different types of health professionals, including family physicians, nurse practitioners, and other health professionals.

As an early step in building primary care teams, we will be building teams that are made up of different types of health professionals, including family physicians, nurse practitioners, and other health professionals.

Health Connect Registry - For Primary Care Network Administrators and Care Providers

June 2021

• The Health Connect Registry is a digital marketplace for health professionals in communities where a primary care network (PCN) has been formed. It offers a secure and easy way for health professionals to connect with other health professionals.

• The Ministry of Health is taking a phased, web-based approach to the registry for PCNs. This means we will be building teams that are made up of different types of health professionals, including family physicians, nurse practitioners, and other health professionals.

• A self-serve tool for PCNs will allow you to manage your PCN's registration and PCN care smoothly and effectively, manage patient registration.

• All PCNs and Health Connect Registry will be available to PCNs with responsibility for facilitating establishment of a practice. The registry will be available to the registry.

• In early 2021, the public will be able to use the online tool to register with PCNs who have formed the registry.

• PCNs will be able to use the online tool to register with PCNs who have formed the registry.
